

A woodpecker with a red forehead patch is perched on a tree trunk. The tree trunk has a mottled pattern of white, grey, and black. The background is a light blue sky.

But That is NOT me!

SUSAN LARSON KIDD
PHOTOS BY RICHARD HOEG

Front Cover

One day, Harry the Hairy woodpecker
asked his sky friends...

What should I do?

You should flit to the feeder
and back to the maple tree.

That's what I do,
said the chickadee.

But that is not me,
said Harry.

Susan the Author

Dr. Susan Larson Kidd is an educational/behavioral consultant for children and youth with disabilities. She is an international teacher, speaker and author. You can follow her at www.drslkconsulting.com

Rich the Photographer

Rich Hoeg grew up in Duluth enjoying his family's bird feeders. After years as a corporate techie he reinvented himself as a wildlife photographer. Follow Rich and his camera at www.365DaysOfBirds.com

What Should I do?

Happy Endings Publishing
Dr SLK Consulting, LLC
www.drslkconsulting.com

